

The Root Cellar of Old Wenna

A one-evening dungeon crawl for characters of level 1.

An original mini-module authored as a test asset for osr-forged.

To the extent possible under law, the author has dedicated this work to the public domain under CC0 1.0. No rights reserved.

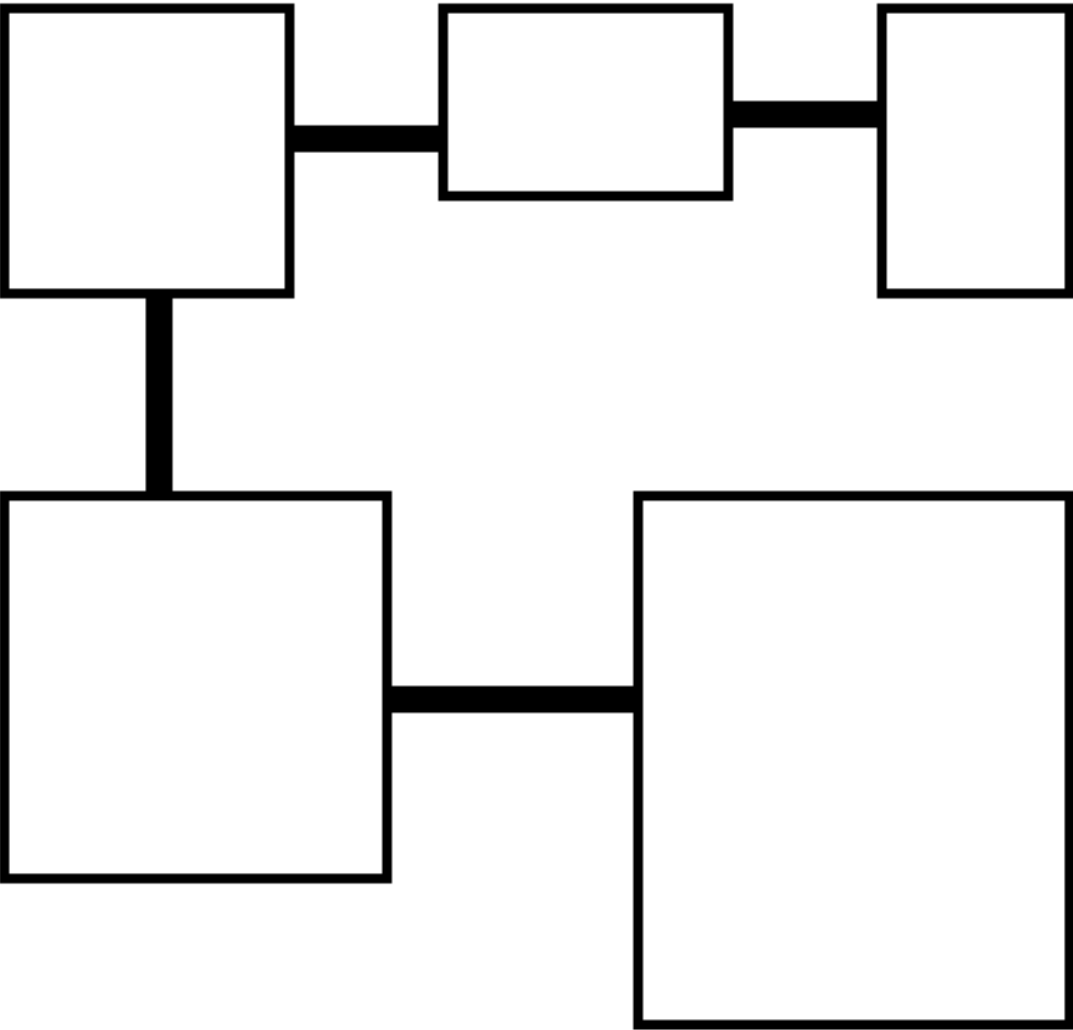

Background and the village of Wennadale

Old Wenna's farmhouse burned down a generation ago, but her famous root cellar survives beneath the ruin, and lately things have been crawling out of it at night.

Wennadale is a village of forty souls. The Dry Barrel inn offers beds and rumors; Maro the peddler sells torches, rope, and oil. The cellar mouth lies one mile east of the village green.

The cellar, level 1: areas 1 to 4

1. Collapsed stair. A 20' x 30' chamber of packed earth. Broken steps descend from the surface. 2 giant rats nest in the rubble and attack anyone bearing a light.
2. Turnip store. A 30' x 40' vault lined with rotted bins. A goblin scavenger named Snagg picks through the bins and will parley if offered food. A corridor continues north to area 3.
3. Cider press. A 20' x 20' room dominated by a ruined press. Under the press bed is a loose flagstone hiding 120 sp and a silver locket worth 25 gp.
4. Flooded gallery. A 40' x 10' gallery ankle-deep in seep water. 4 giant centipedes cling to the ceiling beams. A stuck door in the east wall leads to area 5.

The cellar, level 1: areas 5 to 6

5. Wenna's pantry. A 30' x 30' room, shelves still stocked with preserves. A skeleton in a scorched apron guards the room, attacking anyone who touches the shelves.
6. The deep bin. A 10' x 10' pit-room reached by ladder. 3 stirges roost above a heap of grain sacks. Buried in the grain: a pot of 200 gp and a potion of healing.

Wandering monsters (1 in 6, check every 2 turns): 1-2 giant rats (1d4), 3-4 goblin (1d2), 5-6 giant centipedes (1d2).